Sigma is a proud contributor

Sigma is committed to taking a leadership role in the community by providing the not-for-profit sector with project excellence and cost efficiencies in the construction of numerous churches, community centers, food banks, medical clinics, schools, and shelters.

In particular, Sigma has enjoyed a long association with The Salvation Army, initially collaborating in 1996. Since then, Sigma has built or managed many of The Salvation Army projects, including acting as Project Manager for the 150,000-square-foot Ray and Joan Kroc Corps Community Center in Phoenix.

Dan Hinkson, Sigma's President, has served in a variety of advisory board and consultant positions for The Salvation Army and other not-for-profit organizations, including Beatitudes and Horses Help in Phoenix. Sigma participates in many fundraising and volunteer activities for these and many other groups on a continuing basis.

Commitment to Community

"Dan Hinkson has been involved with The Salvation Army Phoenix South Mountain Corps Community Center for many years...Dan does not seek public affirmation, but generously donates his time and counsel, professional knowledge, expertise and contacts where needed most. I would love to have a whole room full of such volunteers!...members of his staff at Sigma Contracting have, likewise, been valuable assets."

...“The new building is coming along very fast now and the quality is outstanding. Considering the obstacles that you all have had to overcome with the site, I am impressed with how smoothly everything has gone. The Owners are very excited and pleased as well. Sigma field staff goes to great lengths to keep everything on track and coordinated and it really has consistently shown great consideration to the Owners and tenants. In addition, Sigma’s project management department is doing a great job in keeping this site work organized and getting it ready for closeout.

I wanted to thank you again for being involved with that project and will get you into many more.
